Legal basis

The processing is necessary so that I can carry out my responsibilities as a councillor.

Data protection law describes this legal basis as necessary for performance of a public task, or in the public interest.

If you do not provide the information I ask for it may not be possible for me to look into any matters that you raise with me.

I may need to process Special Categories of personal information in order to find out about your case. Where this is necessary, data protection law describes this exemption as being of substantial public interest.

Consent

I do not need your consent to collect or process your personal information. This is because I need the information in order to investigate your case.

Disclosure

I may pass on your personal data to third parties for the purposes of detecting or preventing fraud or other crime, or if it is necessary to consider your case.

These organisations may include Spelthorne Borough Council, Surrey County Council, Surrey Police, the Department of Work and Pensions, HMRC or any other organisation where I am required or permitted by law to share information.

Your records are held in a secure location on a computer system that only I may access. When it is necessary to hold personal information in printed form, these records are held in a secure location and disposed of securely when no longer needed.

Retention period

I will process your personal data for as long as it takes for me to investigate your case and to provide you with a response. I will delete your records if I do not hear from you for more than three months and when I cease to be a Councillor.

Your rights as a data subject

You have the right:

- to request a copy of the information that I hold about you;
- to correct data that I hold about you that is inaccurate or incomplete;
- in certain circumstances you can ask for the data I hold about you to be erased from my records;
